Halsey Pounds Japanese Air Bases

Bradley, Spaatz and Other Generals Reach New York

Report German Army Destroyed By the Allies

"There Just Isn't Anything Left," General Huebner Says

NEW YORK, June 3 (AP)—A group of American generals, headed by Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, arrived by air today from Paris and told a press conference they were agreed on this point: "Germany has been destroyed utterly and completely."

The words were those of professorial-looking Gen. Bradley, commander of the Twelfth army group. He arrived aout 2:30 p. m. aboard a C-54 air transport command plane. A half hour earlier a Flying Fortress had landed at LaGuardia field with Gen. Spaatz, commander of the United States Strategic Airforces in Europe.

Other Generals Arrive

Accompanying Spaatz were Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, commander of the Fifth army corps, and Maj.-Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, who headed the Ninth tactical air command.

Another plane brought Maj.-Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, commander of the One-hundred and Third division, who uttered the now famous reply of "nuts" to a German demand of surrender last December at Bastogne. He was accompanied by Maj.-Gen. Paul L. Williams, of the troop carrier command.

While Spaatz nodded agreement Bradley declared: "I can tell you that Germany has been destroyed utterly and completely."

Huebner said: "One thing we may not be able to understand is how thoroughly the German army was destroyed. There just isn't anything left."

No Future Plans

When asked what their future plans would be each of the generals echoed Bradley's comment: "We go wherever we are sent."

"The magnificent efforts of our Allies and the tremendous force of manpower and industry were the decisive blow," Spaatz said.

Bradley disclosed that one of the toughest decisions he had to make was whether to pause after the St. Lo breakthrough for defense or to try to go through when the Germans counter-attacked.

Waited 24 Hours

"We waited twenty-four hours," he said. "We took one division through. We risked a lot but we bottled up the Seventh German army. St. Lo was one of the highlights of the campaign."

Huebner termed the St. Lo battle "a terrific fight with huge air preparations." He said American mobility paid dividends against Germany.

"That mobility went to work at St. Lo and never stopped until it got to the Siegfried line," he added.

"One thing that Gen. Bradley did made me mad," said Quesada, "and he did it often. We would drub the Germans and he would thank me. I couldn't make him understand that there was no need for thanks because it was part of our job and a pleasure."

The two four star generals were met by their wives, Mrs. Ruth Spaatz, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Mary Bradley, of Moberly, Mo., and a group of high-ranking army officers.

Rome Liberated Year Ago Today

VATICAN CITY, June 3 (AP) — Pope Pius XII, meeting with a group of touring United States senators and army and naval officers today, recalled that the Allies liberated Rome a year ago tomorrow. He expressed gratitude that the city's cultural and art treasures were spared. The pontiff extended his best wishes for the happiness and success of the American people.

LONDON, June 3 (AP) — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden is suffering from duodenal ulcers and has been ordered by his doctor to take at least two weeks' "complete rest," No. 10 Downing street announced today.

Educators Oppose Draft:

Say Year of Training for Boys May Regiment the Minds of Youths

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—The American Council on Education declared today that forty-seven per cent of American college administrators oppose universal military training because it may regiment "the minds of our youths."

And most college educators favor a delay in the decision on a peacetime draft until after peace is established, the Council added.

The educators' viewpoints, determined through a poll, were made known on the eve of hearings by the House committee on postwar military policy on the subject.

Legislation to be taken up by the committee tomorrow would make every able-bodied youth liable for one year of military training after the war.

Announcing the results of a survey taken among college and university presidents, conducted jointly with the American Association of junior Colleges, A. J. Brumbaugh, council vice president, said in a statement:

"The opposition to conscription on the part of college administrators is not due to any fear as to the effect upon the college: The opposition is due primarily to the fear of what universal military training will do in regimenting the minds of our youth."

Dr. Brumbaugh said that the majority of the educators opposing such training advocate an adequate professional standing army and navy recruited by voluntary enlistments. That group, he added, also believes that national security can be maintained by the development of international co-operation with an eye toward armaments limitation and the founding of an international police force.

Details of Nazi Gulf of Mexico Raids Revealed

HOUSTON, Tex., June 3 (AP)—The navy has revealed another of the war's hitherto top secrets—the details of its Gulf sea frontier section's battle against Nazi subs in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Houston Post, in a copyrighted story yesterday, disclosed some of those details.

Nazi subs successfully attacked 111 ships in the Gulf of Mexico and the waters off the Florida coast.

Casualties in these attacks totaled 382.

Two Submarines Sunk

The Gulf Sea frontier forces were credited with only two probable sub sinkings and two more subs seriously damaged.

One sub shot down a navy blimp off the coast of Florida.

The navy was nonetheless successful in putting a stop to sinkings in the gulf. There were only four successful attacks in 1943, none in 1944 and none in 1945.

Nazis sank twenty-five ships off the mouth of the Mississippi.

In the early days of the war, a submarine commander surfaced to survey the damage. There were small boats—pleasure craft in peace time—on the scene helping with the rescue.

"Get the hell out of here before you get hurt," the sub commander told the small boat men.

There was one sinking off the Texas coast in 1942.

Five Ships Torpedoed

Five ships were torpedoed off the coast of Mexico in 1942. However, there were only eight attacks in the extreme west part of the gulf—that is, on routes between Texas and Mexican ports.

All of there details are disclosed in a series of articles and other material released by the headquarters of the gulf sea frontier public relations office in Miami, Fla., to the Post.

The Nazis opened their sea war off the coast of Florida Feb. 19, 1942, only twenty-two miles off Cape Canaveral light. Two torpedoes struck the Pan Massachusetts, twenty men died and ten more were hurt.

Three days later three ships were torpedoed in the same vicinity, the S. S. Republic, the wreck still awash off Hobe sound, the Cities Service Empire and the W. D. Anderson.

Disease Increasing In Baltimore

BALTIMORE, June 3 (AP)—An increase in incidence of scarlet fever in Baltimore was reported today by Dr. Huntington Williams, health commissioner, who said there were sixty new cases reported last week, twenty-three more than in the corresponding week last year.

The health commissioiner also reported sixty-one new cases of whooping cough or thirty-one more than during the corresponding period in 1944. There were fifty-seven new cases of mumps, compared to forty-four for the 1944 period.

10,000 Yanks Visit Hitler's Wrecked Home

BY THOBURN C. WIANT

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany, June 3 (AP)—Aproximately 10,000 American officers and enlisted men swarmed like bees today over this former retreat of Adolf Hitler, now becoming the most popular GI resort in Germany.

It was like a half dozen state fairs rolled into one as the Americans took advantage of the sunshiny, warm day to inspect the wrecked home of Hitler and the nearby places occupied by former Nazi big shots.

Like American Tourists

The GI's behaved like typical American tourists.

They shot thousands of snapshots of each other in front of signs reading "Hitler's house" and "SS hotel."

Representing at least ten different armored and infantry divisions, they came in all sorts of vehicles, crammed ta capacity.

They climbed for 15 minutes to reach Hitler's slightly damaged "eagle's nest," guided by signs posted throughout Berchtesgaden at the foot of the mountain on which the lookout is located.

All in all, it was a smoothly run tourist operation, under the direction of the commander of the One Hundred First Airborne division, Maj. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, Washington, D. C. His outfit is guarding the area.

Use German Headquarters

The One Hundred First's command post is in the peacetime headquarters of Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel. Some division officers live in the headquareters buildings, while others occupy Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's former headquarters in another part of the town.

Rest centers have been set up. One, for officers, is in the luxurious Berchtesgaden Hof, where Hitler once entertained. There the officers have hot baths, eat an abundance of good food, and listen to excellent music during a forty-eight hour pass—all for a half dollar.

The enlisted men have an equally attractive place on Koenig See.

The officers' rest center is run by Capt. Clovis Tollet, New York city, and the one for the enlisted men by Lt. Col. Lee Jones, Philadelphia, Pa.

Russia Holding Out against 4 Allied Powers

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3 (AP) — Four big powers, standing firmly against a fifth, left it squarely up to Russia tonight to hoist the United Nations over its biggest barrier.

For the moment there were no signs of any Soviet activity in the direction of breaking a deadlock on how much authority the great nations should have to veto steps taken to preserve peace by a security council of a proposed international league.

So delegation chiefs of the Big Five—the United States, Britain, France, China and Russia—shoved that question aside momentarily to have another look at a trusteeship problem centering around assurances of independence to dependent peoples.

Even on the veto there is a larger area of understanding than of disagreement among the Fig Five. That is true also of a miscellaneous assortment of other conference questions.

In fact, at a meeting last night, the Big Five statesmen merged their views on a number of points on which they previously had been in complete agreement.

The American delegation was increasing the pressure to wind up the conference, which passed yesterday a date originally set tentatively for adjournment.

10,000 Veterans Reach New York On 3 Troopships

Part of U. S. First Army Is Given Noisy Welcome Home

NEW YORK, June 3 (AP)—More than 1,000 officers and men of the United States First Army—the first to land in Europe, the first to invade Germany, the first to cross the Rhine and the first to meet the Russians—today became the first to return home as a group.

They were among 10,000 veterans of the European war who landed in New York harbor aboard three troopships and four Liberty ships.

Get Noisy Welcome

Whistles and sirens of harbor craft blared a noisy welcome to the 8,944 veterans on the troopships. A WAC band on the welcoming boat and the navy transport band serenaded the ships with jive tunes.

The Monticello, which carried the 1,453 First Army soldiers, bore a huge "A", the group's insigna, on its side.

Lt. Robert Cahn, a First army relations officer who returned recently by plane with Gen. Courtney Hodges, First army commander, said the emblem, nine by fifteen feet, was made of army tents at Weimar, Germany, by the Six Hundred and Second Engineer camouflage battalion.

Many Liberated Prisoners

The Monticello also carried 3,339 American liberated prisoners of war who were taken to Camp Kilmer, N. J., and 409 wounded soldiers and sailors who were sent to Halloran general hospital.

The other troopships were the LeJeune, with 2,424 liberated Americans, 377 rotational troops and 70 wounded; and the Santa Margarita, with 199 liberated prisoners.

The John B. Hood, one of the Liberty ships, which brought 350 American soldiers home, had a 10-foot hole in its bow, souvenir of a collision off Grand Banks, Newfoundland, last Sunday.

Joseph Sutton, chief officer of the Hood, said the vessel was one of ninety-six ships, traveling 156 feet apart, left helpless almost a week by dense fog. Two of the vessels struck icebergs, he said, causing the collision of fourteen others.

Thousands Still Remain in Nazi Camp at Belsen

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

BELSEN, Germany, June 3 (AP)—Belsen now is a camp for the living. Thousands of inmates of the notorious murder plant have returned to their homes in Belgium, France and Holland since the concentration camp was liberated nearly two months ago.

Thousands, however, remain. They are mostly Hungarians, Czechs and Poles.

Belsen concentration camp itself has been burned to the ground by flame throwers. The modern barracks two miles away where SS panzer troops were trained now have been turned into a huge convalescing center.

Patients Now Happy

Patients, their health returning, wander around the extensive grounds picking wild flowers and basking in the sun.

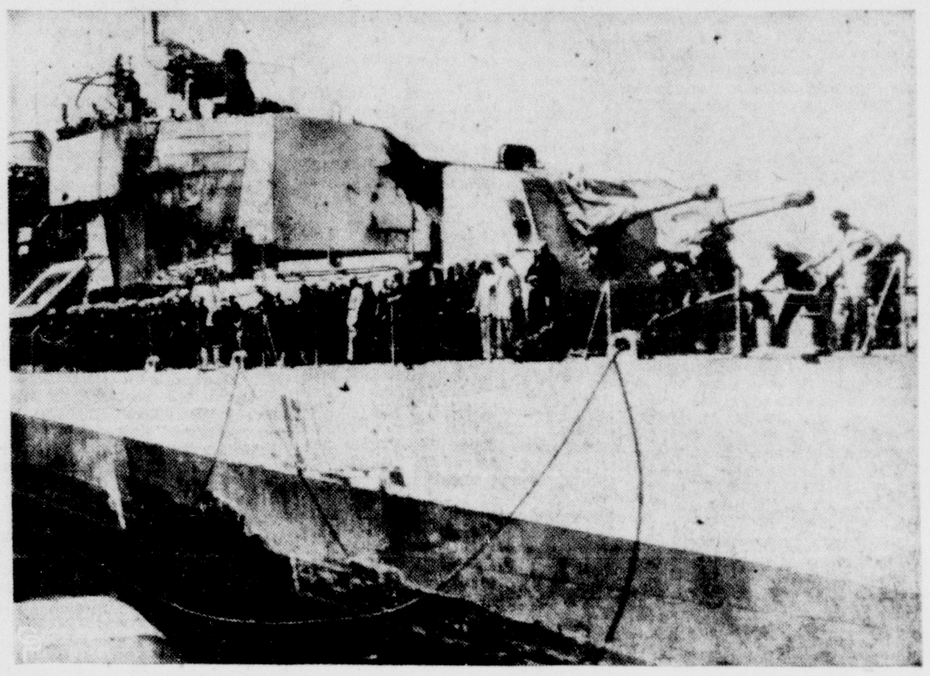
Twenty-nine Poles who once were musicians in Warsaw have found some German instruments and have formed an orchestra. Girls who had taken dancing and voice lessons from European masters gradually are being discovered. One Polish woman has turned out to be an exceptionally-talented violinist.

Many of these artists recently put on a show in a big, portable canvas auditorium used by the Nazis as a camp theater. It seated 500 persons and was packed the first night. Most of the inmates of the former concentration camp had not heard music in five years.

Are Pathetic Sight

It was rather a pathetic sight. The dancers' legs and bodies were still wretchedly thin from starvation. They had to summon all their serength. Strings of beads were made from red, green and blue-colored macaroni. This "jewelry" once made up more than their daily ration of food.

WARSHIP COMES HOME FROM OKINAWA BATTLE



HOME FROM JAPANESE WATERS for "hospital" treatment in some busy West Coast shipyard, the U.S.S. Zellars docks at Los Angeles, Calif., with most of her surviving crew members lining the rail. The Zellars, a destroyer, taking a hit from a Jap suicide plane and its 1,100-lb torpedo off Okinawa, lost thirty-four men killed and thirty-six wounded, and sustained heavy damage to her superstructure.

Bureaucracy Fading:

Fallon Sees Decentralization Of Government Getting under Way

BALTIMORE, June 3 (AP)—Eventual elimination of federal bureaucracy and return of powers to "men elected by the people and directly responsible to the people" is seen in Washington developments by Rep. Fallon (D-Md.)

Fallon, speaking today on the radio spot usually occupied by Sen. Tydings (D-Md.), said a "quiet almost imperceptible" return to Jeffersonian democracy meant "the decentralization of government with local problems returned to local government for proper solution."

"It means, in Washington, that Congress will be enabled to resume its functions as prescribed by the constitution of the United States. It means that the day is at hand when heads of bureaus will no longer exercise power by promulgation of rules and regulations.

"Then will pressure groups be compelled to deal with the duly elected representatives of all of the people and not behind closed doors with men who have no responsibility to the people."

Fallon said a certain amount of bureaucracy was justified as a means of promoting national efficiency but he said the war work "would have been easier and many hardship cases avoided if the rigidity of nationwide rules and regulations could have been relaxed to some degree by recognition of state authority to apply them to meet local conditions."

Seventh Army Finds Detailed Nazi Mine Charts

LONDON, June 3 (AP) — United States Seventh army troops have master maps and detailed charts showing the location and pattern of German minefields sown in nineteen countries, the newspaper Stars and Stripes said today. The maps were captured in the closing days of the war.

The mine plans of France were turned over yesterday to the French army. The Russian army also has received maps and charts pertaining to its territory. Included in the haul, consisting of thirty-eight sealed boxes weighing almost four tons, was information showing the exact locations of the fields as well as that of small mines under village streets.

Known Since August

Lt. Col. Edgar L. Morris of Washington, D. C., chief of the information section of the office of the chief engineer, was quoted by Stars and Stripes as saying the existence of the master plans had been known since last August.

"We alerted every outfit in the field to be on the lookout for them," said Morris. "The Germans started shifting them around, looking for a safe spot: first towards Berlin, and when that fell, they made a run for the Bavarian redoubt.

"But Seventh army troops nabbed the convoy while it was halted by motor trouble and swarmed over the Germans so fast they had no chance to destroy the maps."

100,000 Mines Sown

Maj. Gen. Joubert, inspector general of the French engineers, estimated that more than 100,000 mines were sown in France. He said the maps would "greatly simplify the vast and dangerous task of removing these minefields."

Included in the boxes were mine plans in addition to France of Germany, Finland, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Alsace, Lorraine, Greece, Crete, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Norway, Poland, Serbia, North Africa, the Siegfriend line and Denmark.

Japanese Driven From Three Towns In Mindanao Area

By FRED HAMPSON

MANILA, Monday, June 4 (AP)—Heavy fighting broke out on the Mindanao battlegrounds around Davao as United States Twenty-fourth division troops aided by guerrillas forced the Japanese out of defenses anchored to the towns of Ula, Alhambra and Bayabas, northwest of the city of Davao.

Doughboys who broke into the towns on Saturday found fires in stoves and food on tables, indicating that the Japanese and the civilian populations had fled hastily after coordinated American tank and infantry attacks smashed the outer defenses.

Drive Deep Wedges

A communique from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said deep wedges had been driven into the enemy defenses west of Davao, while on the northern island of Luzon the United States Sixth army had reached points four miles north of Senta Fe.

MacArthur announced that 6,500 Japanese dead had been counted in the Philippines during the past week, and 503 had been captured, raising to 385,480 total Japanese casualties in the campaign of nearly eight months.

During the week American casualties were 225 killed and 657 wounded, MacArthur said. His communique gave no overall total for American losses during the entire campaign.

Report Heavy Fighting

In the eighth army fighting on Mindanao, units of the twenty-fourth division also ran into heavy battling near the base of the Philippines' largest mountain, 10,000-foot Apo, an active volcano.

Troops that landed on Luayon point, seventy-five miles southeast of Davao, on Friday, encountered no opposition in extending their beachhead., but reported destruction of beached Japanese barges by American torpedo boats.

Other action on Mindanao saw Marine divebombers smash hard at Japanese concentrations at Bukidnon, northwest of the Davao area, while torpedo boats and P-40 fighters destroyed three barges, a launch and shore instalaltions at Saragani, South Mindanao.

English Channel Too Formidable For the Germans

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM

LONDON, June 3 (AP)—A mighty, destructive wall of flame, engulfing the English channel and the British coast, would have greeted the Nazis had they attempted an invasion of Britain in the dark years of 1940 and 1941, it was revealed today.

Vast British plans for igniting the sea and Britain's vulnerable south shores were responsible for one wartime rumor that the Germans actually had attempted an invasion, Geoffrey Lloyd, new British minister of information said in his first press conference.

Terrifying Land Obstacles

Lloyd, formerly minister in charge of petroleum warfare, revealed that Nazi forces, after an ordeal amid flames from blazing oil in the channel, would have encountered even more terrifying obstacles on land.

The British planned to set fire to England's beaches, and have barriers of flame sweeping coastal cliff defiles, while garden walls and hedges concealed flame-throwers.

Armored cars equipped with flame-throwers were to have patrolled coastal areas to attack enemy paratroops and planes immediately they touched ground.

Just why Adolf Hitler, after the fall of France, did not hurl his legions at Britain long has been a subject of speculation. But Britain's preparations had something at least to do with it, Lloyd disclosed.

Why Hitler Delayed

Alarmed by what they guessed—or perhaps even knew—of Britain's extraordinary defense, the German command decided to toughen up their troops to face the potential inferno.

They clothed some German troops in asbestos suits and ordered them into the sea which had been set afire off the French coast. But apparently something went wrong with the headpieces of the protective clothing and Nazi casualties were heavy.

This German experiment led to the rumor that the Germans had attempted an invasion, but had failed after the British consumed the attackers in a sea of fire.

British Warning Issued

The Germans tried to keep their experiment a secret, but the British took advantage of it and showered enemy lines with propaganda leaflets warning Nazi soldiers of the fate that awaited them.

Key fire weapon in the British arsenal was a device called the "fougasse" which exploded a ton of burning gasoline on the beaches and amid coastal cliffs and produced a wall of flame 300 yards long.

To set the sea afire gasoline pipes ran out from shore tanks and an automatic release set the gasoline alight.

Attacks as Enemy Raids on Okinawa Are Speeded Up

Seeks To Prevent Launching of Nipponese Suicide Planes

GUAM, Monday, June 4 (AP) — Striking again at bases from which the Japanese might launch Kamikaze (suicide) aerial attacks upon his won force, Adm. William F. Halsey, Jr., attacked Southern Kyushu airfields with carrier planes a second successive day yesterday.

Pilots from vice Adm. John S. McCain's Third fleet carrier task force again found the pickings rather lean, destroying nine Japanese planes for a two-day total of twenty-two destroyed and twenty-three damaged.

Air Attacks Increase

Enemy air activity over Okinawa increased simultaneously, however, reported Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz in today's communique. Planes of the tactical air force—charged with protecting the Okinawa area — shot twenty-six enemy aircraft out of the air. Nimitz made no mention of possible damage to American forces or installations.

Tokyo radio's version of the second day of carrier raids on Kyushu said about 170 planes struck airfields in Miyazaki and Kagoshima prefectures in fourteen waves.

Liberators and Privateers of fleet air wing eighteen sank three small cargo ships along the south coast of Honshu, the main Japanese island. A picket ship, a patrol craft and a lugger were damaged.

Targets in the Palaus were hit by marine fighters and torpedo planes.

Suicide Planes "Nuisance"

Halsey, newly-returned to active command of his United States Third fleet, with Vice Adm. John S. McCain simultaneously resuming command of that fleet's carrier force, described the Japanese Kamikaze (suicide) planes as "just a damned nuisance" on the eve of his strike at their bases Saturday.

Wasting no time in implementing his plans for "knocking hell out of them wherever we find them," Halsey sent his Hellcat fighters and helldiver bombers blasting at installations on Miyazaki, Kokubu, Kushira, Kagoshima and Chrian airfields, all on Kyushu, southernmost of the Japanese home islands.

All these fields presumably have been used to launch Kamikaze attacks on American forces at Okinawa, some 325 miles southward.

Find Pickings Lean

The American carrier fliers found pickings lean so far as Japanese aircraft were concerned, destroying two in the air, eleven on the ground and damaging another twenty-three aground. However, the raiders sent their bombs, rockets and bullets into hangars, barracks and other airfield targets, destroyed two small vessels off the Kyushu coast, and wrecked a locomative at Miyazaki.

Other fliers from the Halsey-McCain force attacked airfield and industrial installations on Minami Daito island, about 200 miles east of Okinawa, also on Saturday. The island had been hit previously by both carrier planes and naval bombardment.

As a possible clue to the small bag of enemy planes on Kyushu, Halsey's chief of staff, Rear Adm. Robert B. Carney, said in advance of the strike that the Japanese were suffering from a shortage of pilots, were using obsolete equipment, and that their stocks of gasoline and spare parts had been reduced by previous American raids.

Hopkins Finds Russian Women Really Beautiful

MOSCOW, June 3 (AP)—The Bolshoi theater ballet school buzzed today over Harry Hopkins's comment that "American women are pretty but Russian women are really beautiful."

President Truman's personal representative made the comment while visiting the school. He appeared interested in the Soviet ballet and had enjoyed it above all other features of Soviet life, it was said here.

Hopkins is expected to remain here at least another day. He has been spending most of his time conferring with members of the United States embassy and chiefs of the various United States missions, including Lend-Lease.

High Command Looking Down Its Nose at Japanese, Writer Says

By TOM REDDY
Associated Press News Analyst

There are signs that the United States High Command is starting to look down its nose at the Japanese, for all the talk about how tough the Pacific war is and will get.

One after another, the generals and admirals are making disclosures of weapons and operations in sharp contrast to the tight secrecy imposed on just about every step where the Germans were concerned.

It isn't a supercilious attitude. American commanders obviously are thinking:

Go ahead, Tokyo, soak up this information. You can't do anything about it. And it won't help your sleepless nights to know just what's coming.

For example, President Truman comes right out and says how many army men, more or less, we intend to send against the Japanese. He says more than 3,500,000. For a long time, it was taboo to say how many men were in Europe.

The navy lifted the veil on its submarine activities. That development was of paramount importance for the navy protects its silent, undersea raiders more than any other branch of the service and necessarily so.

Now the navy tells about the feats of this, or that, submarine and one admiral even goes so far as to say the job of the American submarine is just about completed. Imagine telling the Japanese that a year ago!

Necessity for Seventh War Loan Is Apparent, Gen. Larsen Says

WASHINGTON, June 3—(AP)—A war bond statement from Maj. Gen. Henry L. Larsen, USMC, island commander, Guam:

LARSEN

"The necessity for the Seventh War Loan is apparent. Even if we captured Tokyo today, executed the war criminals and wiped out the last enemy opposition, we still face a tremendously costly job of maintaining a huge army, navy and air force for some time to come."

Chinen Peninsula on Okinawa Cut Off by U. S. Army Tenth Infantrymen

By LEIF ERICKSON

GUAM, Monday, June 4 (AP) — Tenth army infantrymen "effectively cut off and isolated" Chinen peninsula on Southeastern Okinawa yesterday in scoring widespread advances against crumbling Japanese defences Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported today.

Nimitz reported the 184th infantry regiment of Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold's veteran Seventh division reached within a third of a mile of Okinawa's southeastern coastline in a rapid two-mile sweep across the base of the Chinen peninsula.

The doughboys captured Shikiya town, on the southeastern coastal plain, and drove swiftly up the peninsula.

In the central and western sectors, the Ninety-sixth infantry division and the First Marine division scored substantial gains in drives southward from the rubbled ruins of Shuri and Naha.

The Ninety-sixth captured Kamizato town in advancing 500 to 1,200 yards along its sector of the front. Only light resistance was encountered.

MY SORE KNEE

He's a High School freshman and suffering the usual pangs over that perennial problem — "Popularity — How do I get that way?"

Remember your own young misery, Bill, at your first Real Dancing Party? For weeks you'd gloated over your coming debut. Frankly you'd been something less than a social triumph during grammar grade events. What with goose pimples, warts, a stutter and no place to put your surplus hands, life was a rugged ordeal.

But that was ancient history. You'd wow 'em now in your new serge suit, three inch collar, hair slicked down in a "football cut" and shoes both shining and smelling like the kitchen range. No snickers now . . . at least they'd sit up and take notice. You could see Les Cooper chewing his nails in envy. Maybe — maybe! — you'd even get to take Lucille Conners home.

But did you? You did not. After one desperate glance at the unfamiliar glory, you fled. So much for the mysterious art of Achieveing Popularity in 1903. Nor were little boys the only victims. Well do I recall my own pangs at the advanced age of seven. I was not a magnetic maiden. I was pigeon toed and buck toothed with a chronic snivel. My chinless profile gave me the general appearance of a disappointed carp. Yet no one longed more ardently than I for social success. But what had I to offer—what special talent or appeal? Nothing. No, on second thought I did have something. Something that already set me apart.

I - had - a - sore - knee.

Now sore knees were not usually a rarity in those days. But mine was really unique—a magnificently mangled mutilation over which I wore an extensive rubber cap, hitherto unknown in our rural parts. Little girls as well as the far-more-tobedesired little boys who had not hitherto condescended to give me a second look now thronged about, wanting to know what lay beneath that alluring bandage. And begging a look.

Here was my chance! I'd failed in the social whirl. But a Sore Knee—here was something I could tackle. Gone was my bashfulness, forgotten my snivel. In practically no time flat I was doing a land office business, merely by swapping a peek of my knee for a chew of Eddie Higgin's gum, a demonstration of Alva McBain's wiggly ears, a glimpse of George Stevens' horsehair water snake and Jimmy Malone's birthmark. Whoops! I'd turned the trick at last. I'd found the secret of popularity.

Which was quite a simple matter after all. You didn't need to be brilliant or beautiful, rich or glamorous. You merely needed to give something the other fellow wanted. . . . something that would break down your mutual awkwardness and establish a common, warming bond.

And in more than half a century, I've never known that secret to fail. Whether we're seven or seventy, we humans are still beset by loneliness—still long to be sought and desired. And we can be—if we're willing to share. There's the whole trick—no black magic. Just give. Doesn't matter what—a warming laugh, an understanding hand clasp—or a peek at your sore knee . . . as long as it carries with it a part of your real self, it will serve as a key to every human heart.

Soldier Thinks If Husband Pays Bills He's "Good"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority of Problems of Love and Marriage

A little while ago a wife aired her grievances in this column and questioned if a husband could be called "good" because he pays the household bills.

The writer said she'd like a little amusement thrown in to tip the scales toward good. Her husband has an irritating way of seizing a clean shirt after dinner and going off in search of amusement—bowling, playing cards, movies, etc. In none of these diversions is she included.

And now here's an answer from a soldier in Illinois; he thinks I won't print his letter but here it is:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Did it ever occur to the lady who signs herself 'Puzzled' that a single man can live very well and much more cheaply than he can by taking unto himself a wife and family? Instead of complaining, 'Puzzled' should be thankful that she has a husband to pay her bills and at the same time put up with her nagging.

"Millions of girls will go husbandless through life, not because they want to, but because with war and other things, the available supply of marriageable men is limited. I'm glad her husband is the one who got her and not I. I feel sorry for this human cash register to whom she's married and am glad he goes bowling, card playing, or anywhere else to get away from her nagging.

H. Z. O."

As Mr. Soldier doesn't state whether he's married or single, it's impossible to determine whether he drew a nagger in the matrimonial grab-bag or not. His letter sounds as if such might have been his unhappy fate.

His suggestion that a man may live more comfortably and economically single than by tying himself to a wife and family hints he might have been married and gotten the worst of it.

If this is the case, I sympathize. Not all women are naggers, and an unattached man after fifty, unless he's completely absorbed in some important work, is apt to become absorbed in himself. He's apt to grow selfish and grouchy—loneliness follows.

Even if a married man becomes indifferent to his wife—and unhappily many of them do—his children help to bridge these lonesome years when he has to forego the things that used to absorb him. I'm wishing a better fate for my G.I. Joe correspondent, whether married or single, than a nagging wife.

Unreformed Argentina

The State department would be the last to talk about it, but actually things aren't going too well with Argentina since she was admitted to the United Nations.

First obligation of one of the United Nations is to prosecute the war and do everything possible to help her allies. However, Argentina is doing just the opposite in regard to meat.

Her meat contract with the British is now up for renewal. When Argentina was not in the United Nations, she sold her entire output of meat to the British (through a lend-lease arrangement whereby the USA supplied the cash). But now that Argentina is in the United Nations, she has got skittish about renewing the meat contract.

Note—Some of the secret testimony given by Nelson Rockefeller has now trickled out of the House Appropriations committee. Testifying as to why his Latin American Cultural Relations committee needed funds, Rockefeller hinted that the woods were full of Communists below the Rio Grande. Asked why Argentina was admitted to the United Nations, he replied that it was the most anti-Communist state in South America and was needed as a spearhead against Russia.

THE big breeze at Atlantic's Point Breeze plant in Philadelphia is a man-made one. Atlantic sends it rushing through pipes of the fluid catalytic unit as part of the process of making aviation combat gas.

The harnessed air has to move fast. Its job is helping to carry the fluid catalyst . . . literally pushing it around the pipes.

The big winds roaring through are generated by the giant blower shown. The man in the picture is operating the air flow valves which regulate the circulation of working air.

At Port Arthur, Texas, this Point Breeze scene is duplicated. There another huge "cat" plant — twin of the Philadelphia unit — is pouring out an equal flood of 100-octane gasoline.

All this super-fuel goes to power America's tremendous air armadas. But after Victory, Atlantic research will speedily convert Atlantic's "cat" plants to the processing of powerful, economical gasoline for your car.

Be Your Age and Enjoy Its Good Increment

THE AMERICAN VERNACULAR some time back was liberally sprinkled with the injunction: "Be your age." We don't hear it so much any more, perhaps for the reason that a lot of new pithy sayings have crowded it to the rear, but it is something which holds good yet and a good exemplification of it is given in the course of a column by Eric Brandeis in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. He goes the old saying one better, however, by indicating that one should not only be one's age but should enjoy it, whatever the years, the more the better.

"A youngster," he wrote, "asked me yesterday:

"Don't you have to get old? Don't you wish you were 21 again so that you could have a real good time like we kids have?"

"Without a minute's hesitation I answered:

"'No, I don't wish I were 21 again! And what makes you think I don't have a good time? As a matter of fact I'm having a better time right now than I ever had in my life. Only it's a different kind of a good time.'

"Just so that you don't get the wrong idea—I'm not old. I'm just in what polite people call 'the prime of life,' slightly on the well-done side.

"Of course I can't have the kind of a good time that a 21-year-old would enjoy. But on the other hand, his kind of a good time would bore me to extinction.

"Nevertheless I have definitely found this: No matter how old you are, Nature—or maybe it is yourself—adds something to your enjoyment of life for everything that you lose.

Night-club life, dancing, staying up until the early hours of the morning—that, to me, isn't a good time any more.

"Not that I wouldn't, perhaps still like to enjoy these things. But I simply don't. And I've got to have my sleep these days."

There are plenty of things left, however, to interest him, and to give him enjoyment, things which he wouldn't have enjoyed twenty years ago but which afford real enjoyment now, such as good reading, good music, quiet companionships and so on.

And so it should be. Those who they think there isn't anything worth while after one travels beyond the relatively trivial pleasures of youth should find new zest in later years, as this man has found it, and enjoy to the full the benefits of the earned increment of all that has gone before.

Reconversion Fair Play

THE COUNTRY has awaited with interest the new plan under which industries which have been converted to war work will be aided to return to peace work. Something of the policy was revealed when the War Production Board authorized the automobile industry to produce 200,000 cars this year for civilian use.

But the board gave no assurance that the material will be available. It is up to the manufacturers to find the material to rebuild, retool and resume the production of cars. The industry will have little market worry, for the cars are to be rationed by the OPA.

There was a noteworthy lack of price discussion in the announcement. It is assumed, since the plan was worked out with the industry, that there will be enough profit incentive in the resumption program to finance the reconversion as soon as possible. Only in this way can unemployment in the industry be minimized and the market for new cars taken care of as a service to the people.

The process in this, as well as other industries, will be watched carefully for evidence that the country is fair to the industries which it drafted for war work. The gearing of a country's industry to war is, of course, a war job and a war expense. But it is also the duty of the country, as war work and a war expense, to restore the war-diverted industries to peace production.

Following the First World war, some industries were badly handled. They were left without money to finance conversion, and their credit was hurt when the government dumped surplus war goods on their potential market. There should be none of that this time, especially since so much of profit has been seized for taxes.

The prosperity of the country demands industrial fair play in reconversion.

When Humor Is Free To Bubble Again

IT IS a fair assumption that practically every American is hoping for a return of conditions, not all of them economic, to which it is natural to look back upon as enjoyed, before war upset the world. The good old days!

The cry in some form is found throughout literature. There was the beautifully phrased lamentation of the psalmist: "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion."

What Americans recall of their temporary Utopias would make fine subjects for debating societies. It is undeniable that there have been periods in American history when comfort and cheer were apparently pretty well distributed. Such times were cheered and illuminated by a humor that was truly a feature of the American way of life.

Hardly a county but had its own citizen with a gift for giving a funny twist to things. His comments on current events might be wise as well as droll. These often attained a considerable circulation through local newspapers, whose editors frequently possessed a funny streak of their own.

In discussion of postwar America, what is desirable and essential is that the tolerance that is a natural accompaniment of humor shall be in the background. The day's casualty lists are a continuing sorrow. The men and women who are making their sacrifices are not only a loss to their kindred and their communities, but the nation has lost just so much of the buoyancy and joyousness of youth that are blended in the American spirit.

The dislocations due to war can not be overcome in a day or in years, perhaps, but those who are afflicted with nostalgia for times when wholesome mirth was part of the national life need not be discouraged. Defeatism is not a desirable word in the American vocabulary. It has been employed much too frequently in the war years. No doubt it will be deleted from their lexicons by patriotic Americans when American humor is free to bubble again.

Meat Distribution Still a Problem

WASHINGTON is attempting frantically to inaugurate steps to get more meat available to Americans properly distributed. The meat situation in the big cities is critical. Whereas people in rural sections do not have enough red points, housewives in the large cities are unable to find anything to purchase.

The distributoin problem has been explained in this way: The federally-inspected slaughterers, who supply the big cities, are processing only two-thirds as much meat as a year ago. There are fewer hogs and sheep on farms and beef cattle are reaching slaughterers in diminishing numbers.

Farmers are killing more steers for home consumption and small slaughternig places which are not federally inspected are stepping up activities. The government is taking fifty per cent of the output of federally inspected plants, compared to thirty-seven percent a year ago, when the output was larger. The result is that meat available for big city consumers is down fifty per cent compared to the meager supplies of a year ago.

Under private markets this maldistribution would be taken care of by a pricing system which would elevate quotations in centers of scarcity until meat began to flow to that point. The government is attempting to revise its complicated control structure to channel meat to places where it is not now going. It remains to be seen how much luck officialdom will have in a field in which private enterprise formerly operated satisfactorily.

Postwar Travel Prospects Widen

A LARGE PERCENTAGE of the American population will take to wheels or to the air the moment restrictions on travel are removed after the defeat of Japan. For more than three war years persons who had to travel endured many hardships. They look forward to days when they can go on pleasure trips de luxe.

Railroad lines are planning to make this possible. Coach designers are exhibiting postwar creations which eclipse all previous conceptions of comfort en route. New trains will have luxuries and conveniences never before thought possible.

There will be comfortable seats for daytime travel. Movies, dancing, individual radios, telephones, improved dining car service—all this and many other features will make the railroad trip of the future a thing of joy for either long or short trips.

Innumerable revolutionary safety devices have been developed. Shock absorbers will provide smoother riding. Improved brakes will eliminate jerky stops. Speed will be increased. In short, those who travel by rail after the war will encounter many surprises, all conceived in the interest of their comfort and safety.

THE RIVER

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

There is no more fascinating study than that of the rivers of the world. They are the real arteries of life to the nations of the world. Not only do they serve as agencies of transportation and commerce, but they also serve to fertilize millions upon millions of acres of ground that give to mankind both substance and life.

But beyond and away from all this, the river has a wonderful personality. It sings, it weeps, it frolics, it gets wild and often destructive; but in the main it is peaceful, comforting and inspiring. Nearly always the river is winding, continuously presenting new vistas and new beauties. Its banks are friendly banks with over-reaching foliage, and rare wild flowers scenting the waters as they go their way.

The part played by rivers in the building of civilization and in the writing of the history of the world has been very great. Many of our best reading books have centered about rivers. Mark Twain's book "Life on the Mississippi" is well known, and a fine book, at that. One of the most interesting pieces of writing about a river is H. M. Tomlinson's description of the Great Amazon, in Brazil, found in his finest book, "The Sea and the Jungle." And there is a wonderful series of books just on the rivers of the United States, that is being completed.

I shall never forget the languid, tropical and mysterious St. John's River, in Florida, nor that deep-set, ever-dashing Colorado River, eating away the life about it in the gorge of the Grand Canyon of Arizona. And what useful, noble rivers are those of the Mississippi, the Columbia, the Hudson, and the St. Lawrence! Endless, too, are the stories of love and romance centering about such rivers as the Nile, the Danube, the Volga and the Jordan.

Stephen Foster has immortalized the Swanee River in his beautiful song "Old Folks at Home"—a river in Florida, by the way, that I understand Foster never saw! Even as Longfellow immortalized the Evangeline land, in Nova Scotia, but which he also never saw.

David, the Psalmist, undoubtedly had in mind the river when, in the Twenty-third Psalm, he wrote: "He leadeth me beside the still waters." And in the Forty-sixth Psalm he again wrote: "There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High."

Corcoran Is Responsible for T. V. Soong Being Premier of China, Pearson Asserts

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Washington observers have commented on the political demise of the man once closest to the White House throne —"Tommy the Cork" Corcoran. Yet last week that same Tommy the Cork accomplished almost single-handed the amazing feat of changing the government of China.

He got Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek out as premier of China and put his friend T. V. Soong in —despite the fact that the two brothers-in-law hate each other.

Moreover, he did this largely by a photograph.

For many years Corcoran has been a close friend of T. V. Soong, brother of Madame Chiang Kai-Shek. Corcoran was one of the most ardent battlers for opening the Burma road and getting supplies to China. So, when Soong came to Washington last month, Corcoran put his famous brain to work to get some token, significant to the Chinese, which would signify Soong's influence with the Truman administration.

He figured that a photograph of Soong with the new president of the United States, plus the secretary of war, plus the secretary of the navy, plus the secretary of state, would do the trick.

So Corcoran got his close friend, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, to arrange for the photograph in the rear garden of the White House. Next day, there was featured on the front pages of many newspapers a picture of the Chinese foreign minister with Truman, Stettinius, Stimson and Forrestal.

Chinese Face

The effect on China was electrifying. No other visiting dignitary had ever appeared in such a picture. Not even British Foreign Minister Eden, nor Molotov, nor French Foreign Minister Bidault.

To China, "face" counts almost more than anything. And a man who is close to the top leaders of a government which is the main benefactor of China automatically rates tops at home.

In addition, T. V. Soong brought home the bacon in other respects. He got a final promise of the United States gold previously earmarked for China. And he worked hard on United States officials to get 3,000 tons of cotton goods sent to China per month. This latter request riled the army, already short on cotton textiles. Also it will hit civilian supplies of cotton goods. So Soong got no definite promise.

But with his prestige sufficiently enhanced by the photograph, T. V. Soong flew off to become premier of China.

Note—Part of Soong's argument to United States Cabinet members who are considered anti-Russian was that the Chungking Government needed to be strengthened as a bulwark against Moscow. To liberal cabinet members, Soong argued that if his prestige was built up, he would be strong enough to go to Moscow and work out a deal for co-operation with the northern Chinese Communists.

Ed Pauley's Oil

When Attorney General Biddle started his suit to recover submerged oil under the ocean—especially off the California coast—he was hitting directly at one of President Truman's staunchest supporters—El Pauley.

However, Biddle made the move only after getting Truman's advance consent.

Ed Pauley, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee and mainspring in winning Truman's Chicago nomination, is one of the independent oil operators who have been sucking a fortune out of the ocean bed between the California coast and the three-mile limit. Also raking in lush fortunes are his good friends, Standard Oil of California. It is reported that Pauley's take from submerged oil runs to around $30,000 a month.

For several years, both Biddle and Secretary of the Interior Ickes have been wanting to crack down on this flow of oil from what they consider federal lands. Biddle prepared a suit back in 1939. But nothing happened. Roosevelt couldn't get steamed up about it and oil company pressure was terrific. Ed Pauley at that time was not particularly high in Democratic party councils. But other Californians were, and the State of California itself reaps a rich harvest from leasing this ocean shelf to private companies.

Finally, just after Truman entered the White House, Biddle placed before him the submerged oil controversy and recommended a lawsuit. The new president didn't hesitate. He OK'd the move immediately.

"You'd better take some time to think it over," the attorney general suggested. "It's a delicate question. It might be a good idea to talk it over with Ed Pauley."

Truman did think it over. By this time Ed Pauley had become much more influential in the Democratic party than in 1939 and Truman was considerably indebted to him. However, Truman did not change his mind. He told Biddle to proceed with the suit. And though the attorney general is leaving the cabinet, the suit for recovery of the submerged oil is going ahead anyway.

Note—The potent array of oil lobbyists Biddle had to overcome included Howard K. Marshall, former attorney for Standard of California and for the Petroleum Administration for War; Welbourn Mayock, attorney for the Democratic National Committee and Ed Pauley; Oscar Lawler, former solicitor of the Interior department and prominent California attorney; and Pauley himself. Sitting on the sidelines also was Ralph Davies, vice

Truman Promises Full Prosecution Of Pacific War

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, June 3 — President Truman has taken cognizance of the possibility that Japan may be deriving comfort from the war-weariness or slackening of effort in the United States.

The message sent to Congress — one of the longest in recent history —endeavors to tell the American people, as wll as the Japanese, that the war in the Far East is to be prosecuted relentlessly. It gives enough details of the program to assure anybody that whatever curtailments in production there may be will be relatively small.

In reality the munitions production will be larger by many times over so far as the Pacific is concerned. The United States has enough industrial capacity to increase many-fold the supplies to the Pacific and still permit some production of civilian goods.

The best indication of what is happening is to be found in the $54,000,000,000 munition production which Mr. Truman says will be the rate for the balance of this year. That figure is nine-tenths of 1944 and about equal to 1943, and certainly both those years were characterized by a far greater percentage of absorption of our factory facilities in total war than ever before.

Gradual Effect on Employment

The truth is the United States probably never used more than twenty-five per cent of her war production in the Pacific area prior to V-E day. Even if that figure were trebled it would still permit of some leeway for civilian goods.

So far as the economic readjustments are concerned, it is evident now that the curtailment in war contracts will have a gradual rather than a demoralizing effect on employment.

The thing which the president and his advisers are cautioning against is any feeling that workers can abandon the war plants and seek other jobs. The situation on the West coast in the navy yards is serious. Employes have left work to get other jobs and there are not enough men to repair battle damage quickly. This is but another way of saying that our navy's strength has been crippled and that relief for ships in the battle line will have to be postponed, putting a bigger strain on the navy than was anticipated.

Fleet Big Enough

The United States has a big enough fleet to take care of any contingency in the Pacific but if the repairing of warships gets behind schedule, it merely means that our naval operations will be slowed up and the end of the Japanese war postponed more and more each day.

The thirty-day period since V-E day was bound to be a critical one. President Truman evidently waited to see just what would be the effect of the termination of the war in Europe on war plants and apparently the message just sent to Congress was carefully prepared after consultation with the joint chiefs of staff and the heads of the War and Navy departments.

It means that a decision was reached to squelch promptly any hope the Japanese war lords might have had that war weariness and the popular demand for demobilization of our troops in Europe would throw us off balance and give the Tokyo government a chance for a negotiated peace or a stalemate.

Truman's Answer Unequivocal

The answer given by President Trumon is unequivocal. If the Japanese business men want to see their plants and manufacturing facilities destroyed and their country reduced to a shambles, they can do so by letting the war drag on. There will be no chance for Japan to rise again because she lacks the ships, the resources and the manufacturing facilities. The air power of the United States is about to be exerted in a bombing barrage such as no nation has ever suffered, not even Germany at the most concentrated period of the air attacks.

Japan must make up her mind soon. Whatever she expected to get out of the attitude of the people of the United States after V-E day, she must have been disappointed For even the difficulty in keeping war workers at their jobs on the West coast is, relatively speaking, small in relation to the momentum of the war effort as a whole, which has been stepped up instead of being diminished.

Mr. Truman's message will aid our bureaus of psychological warfare in broadcasting to the Japanese that they might as well surrender unconditionally now and save something out of the wreckage.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Just like all the other tourists, when I got to Washington, I went sightseeing. It was really beautiful . . .

We drove right past the mint . . . I kept looking for the julep. And I was very impressed with the F.B.I. Building. I wanted to go in and see J. Edgar Hoover but they told me it was impossible . . . He was in conference with a committee of cartoonists, trying to dream up another desperate character.

I saw the Pentagon Building. The Pentagon Building . . . that's Texas with a roof. Remember how you used to laugh about that story of the lady who went in the Pentagon Building and got lost and when she finally found her way out she was married and had two sons. Well, don't laugh about it anymore . . . they haven't been able to find her sons yet.

And, of course, I took in the Washington Zoo. They used to have those animals in cages to keep 'em from eating the people. Nowadays it's vice versa. The signs on the cages read: "PLEASE DO NOT FEED THE ANIMALS . . . THE KEEPER NEEDS IT MORE THAN THEY DO!!"

I wanted to go up to the top of the Washington Monument but they wouldn't let me. They said the people living in it objected to having strangers walk through their bedrooms.

When we went past the Treasury Building, I got off to have an important conference with Morgenthau. He wasn't at all co-operative. He absolutely refused to let me go in and count the money in my old-age pension.

The Centerville (Pa.) Reds, backing up Mel Nee's four-hit twirling with a twelve-blow assault on two Queen City hurlers, drubbed the Brewers, 8-2, on Stitcher field yesterday to take undisputed possession of first place in the Pen-Mar Baseball League race. A combination of cold weather, rain and wet grounds kept the other four loop clubs idle. Frostburg Legion had been scheduled to entertain the Midland Indians and Cumberland Legion was to have played the Lonaconing Republican Club at Lonaconing.

The Reds, by trimming the Brewers, kept their perfect record intact, pinned the first defeat of the season on Charley Doyle's outfit, got some measure of revenge for their loss to Queen City in last season's playoff series which went to the locals three games to none and shattered the Brewmen's fourteen-game victory streak, which had its inception in August of last year.

Nee, who registered his third straight pitching triumph, struck out eleven and gave three bases on balls. All of the four hits he yielded went for extra bases with Jim Angellatta, Dick Lynch and "Spike" Herboldsheimer getting doubles and Nick Perlozzo a triple.

Bill Stevenson, who left the mound in the fifth inning, was charged with his first defeat against one victory. He allowed eight hits before giving way to Howard "Lefty" Bill with none out in the fifth.

Centerville put the game on ice in the first inning when it shoved across three runs. George Cook tripled to center, "Nebs" George bobbled David Rose's grounder to short, Pete Cook singled to center and advanced on Perlozzo's error, Rose was thrown out at the plate on Roy Mickey's fielder's choice, Alton Nave squeezed in Pete Cook and Glentis Streett scored Mickey with a single to center.

The Brewers' two markers came in the fifth. Angellatta poked a ground rules double to right, Lynch hit a two-bagger to center and moved to third on a passed ball and Herboldsheimer doubled to right.

George Cook and Pete Cook each had three hits for the Pennsylvanians. Don "Bubbles" Whiteman, Brewer third sacker, and Lynch, Queen City second baseman, featured afield. The box:

DeMolay at Bedford Road (Allegany)
North End Social at Gephart (Stitcher).
Block Busters at Police Boys (Community).
Colts at Royale Dairy (Penn avenue).
Confectioners at Celanese (East Side).
Diplomats at Senators (Locust Grove).

Five of the six clubs in the Southern division of the Midget Baseball League improved their records at the expense of Northern division outfits yesterday afternoon with Gephart tossers trimming the Block Busters, 12-1, at Community park to prevent Southern combinations from sweeping the six-game program.

While Gephart strengthened its grip on first place in the Northern group, the Senators remained a half-game in front of Royale Dairy and the South End Cleaners in the Southern by turning back DeMolay, 8-2, at Campobello.

In other contests, Royale thumped Bedford Road, 9-3, at Allegany; Confectioners scored over the Diplomats, 16-5, at Penn avenue, and the Police Boys' club romped to a 17-1 triumph over the North End Colts at Community park.

Creegan Hurls Two-Hitter

Creegan, on the mound for Gephart, allowed two hits—scratch singles by Williams and Banks, and struck out sixteen. Lease had two homers and Livengood one four-bagger for Gephart.

Buser, Senators' elbower, struck out ten and also had a two-hitter. Elmer Freeland led the leaders with four, including a homer in the sixth with one aboard and a double. Kendall and Bachman each had a safety for DeMolay.

Burke, with a double and two singles, sparked the Dairymen, while O'Neal was the only Bedford Road batter with more than one hit. Royale broke a 3-3 tie with four runs in the fifth and then added two more for good measure in the seventh.

Johnny Waltman, who pitched for Hyndman (Pa.) high in the Bi-State Conference this spring, went the route for the Cleaners, allowing three hits and striking out sixteen. Poland had a triple for the Cleaners and Robison a three-bagger for North End Social.

Barley Hits Jackpot Homer

Barley's homer with the bases loaded in the sixth inning featured the Confectioners' eight-run explosion in that frame. He also poked a triple. Every Confectioner had at least one bingle. Nicholson and Horwath shared the pitching burden for the victors with the former fanning eight and Horwath six.

Jack Klosterman marked up his third victory for the Police Boys, scattering three hits. Huffman, Eyler and Eckard paced the PBC at the plate. The Colts' only run came in the fourth on a single and three errors. The scores:

Don Blaul Wins Rapplier Award

Outstanding in football and baseball, William Donald Blaul was presented the Rapplier club award—a $25 war bond—at the LaSalle high school graduation exercises last night.

Blaul held down first base on the baseball team and played left tackle on the Explorer eleven last fall. The award is given annually to the best student-athlete in the graduating class.

The "Spirit of LaSalle" award of $25, donated by Mrs. Carl F. Schmutz in memory of her son, Carl Ray Schmutz, killed on Luzon in the Philippines on March 2, 1945, will be divided among the first five players on the basketball squad—Ed Gunning, Ray Shaffer, Jack Steiner, Karl Muller and Tommy Geatz.

Ed Gunning, forward on the 1944-45 Blue and Gold basketball outfit, received a $5 award given to the best all-around cager in the senior class. The prize was donated by Mrs. Kalbaugh in memory of her grandson, Donald Laffey.

NEW YORK, June 3 (AP)—The New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians divided a doubleheader before 15,051 shivering fans today, the Indians coming back to take the nightcap 4-1 after the Yankees had taken the opener 8-2.

Steve Gromek registered his sixth triumph against one defeat, holding the first place Yankees to six hits in the nightcap while the Indians bunched four of their six hits for all their runs off Walt Dubiel.

The Indians scored once in the first inning of the nightcap on felix Mackiewicz's double, a walk, a double steal and Pat Seerey's infield hit. They drove Walter Dubiel to cover in the third with a three-run blast that clinched the verdict. A hit by Dutch Meyer, three passes, a sacrifice, and Don Ross's single accounted for the tallies. Waring and Crew Will Have Daytime Radio Program

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, June 3—Fred Waring and his crew, under an exclusive contract, starts a new daytime series, to run five mornings a week, at 11 o'clock Monday. Fred last week completed a sponsored series on the Blue.

Fred thus returns to the network on which he broadcast so long in the evenings. He plans the same general type of show in the new daytime spot, but each broadcast will be for thirty minutes instead of the former fifteen.

The Blue, taking a look at its afternoon schedule, is making some changes therein. For one thing, the Fitzgeralds and their chatter are to have the 2:30 half-hour Mondays through Fridays in addition to their recently introduced Saturday show. At 3, the network is introducing a dramatic series, also half-hour Mondays through Fridays, under the title of Best Sellers. It will use each week's five episodes to re-enact some late or older novel, starting with "The Ballad and the Source."

To fill in the summer vacation time of Sherlock Holmes, MBS is introducing at 8:30 a program that the only way to find out what it is will be to tune in. A one-time broadcast for MBS at 7:15 is to be in behalf of the postal pay bill.

Lily Pons is billed to sing four numbers as guest of the Don Voorhees concert on NBC at 9. She recently returned with her husband, Andre Kostelanetz from their second overseas USO tour . . . Jay Jostyn, radio's D.A., is to narrate a United Jewish appeal program on the Blue at 10 . . . Marshall Field is to be the guest panel of Information Please, NBC at 9:30.

At present there are thirty-three states with some form of income tax, but only nine obtained more than twenty per cent of their total tax revenue from it in 1944.

During the German air assault on Britain in 1940 and 1941, the parents of some 5,000 British children sent them to the safety of friendly American homes.

LaSalle Seniors Urged to Combat Forces of Evil

John H. Mosner Addresses Graduates; 29 Receive Diplomas

Addressing the twenty-nine members of the graduating class of LaSalle high school last evening in Carroll hall, John H. Mosner, cashier of The Second National Bank, urged the seniors to go forth, fully prepared to do their part in the global struggle against the forces of evil and resolved to do whatever is necessary to guarantee that never again shall there arise anywhere a repetition of the threat to peace and justice.

"Let us once and for all make impossible a return of Italian Fascism, German Nazism or Japanese militarism," the speaker declared.

Speaking of postwar problems, Mosner stated that it seems fair to predict, for a term whose exact length cannot be accurately predetermined, there will be a period of high business activity and comparatively full employment. He predicted, however, that eventually history will repeat itself, our economy will slow down, that the wheels of industry will revolve at a decelrating rate, and that workers with the least skills will be the first to suffer.

Praises G. I. Bill

Mosner said that one of "finest evidences of our growing social consciousness is the G.I. Bill of Rights." Admitting that this piece of legislation is far from perfect, the speaker said that all interested groups are fairly in agreement on the need of its simplifying and broadening revision.

In conclusion, the speaker urged the graduates to uphold the outstanding record of their predecessors. "Remember—no matter where duty may call you, even into the far corners of this war-torn globe—that there are no substitutes for honor, courage and virtue," he asserted. "Never forget your responsibility as God-fearing men and Christians."

Brother Dacian Stephen, F.S.C., principal of LaSalle, introduced the principal speaker.

The Rev. Brother G. Paul, F.S.C., Ph.D., provincial of the Baltimore district, with supervision over fifteen schools in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey and the District of Columbia, stressed four important points in a brief talk to the graduating class, as follows: 1. Religious and secular instruction must not be separated because education is the formation of the whole man. 2. These troubled times have brought a revival of religious thought and expression. 3. The abandonment of Christ and his

Bids for Lights At Airport Will Be Asked by CAA

Proposals Are Expected To Go to Contractors about June 1

J. T. Metz, chief of the construction unit of airways engineering for the Civil Aeronautics Administration announced over the weekend that bids at the Cumberland Municipal Airport will be received about July 5.

Proposals will be sent to the contractors about June 21, Metz said, and added that the successful bidder will begin work between Aug. 1 and 15. Metz said plans call for installation of a light system for the runways but that no signal tower is provided.

Great satisfaction that the bids are to be received soon was expressed by Charles Z. Heskett, airport director, but he said that he is puzzled by Metz's statement that a beacon, but no tower is to be installed. The director added that he understands that equipment already here includes part of a tower and that he previously understood the CAA would erect a tower and the city the beacon. Materials stored here are valued at about $90,000 according to Heskett.

Excavation work at the airport, which is being done by the Grandview Company, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., is expected to be completed in about two weeks if good weather prevails, Heskett said.

Blacktopping is expected to be started by the DeMatteo Construction Company, Quincy, Mass., early in July.

Nothing Greater Than Soul Value, Priest Declares

There is really only one point to Catholic education and it is based on the fact that a man has a soul to save, and that saving it is the chief business of life, the Rev. William Joyce Russell, assistant pastor, told the fourteen members of the graduating class of St. Mary's high school at annual commencement exercises last evening in St. Mary's church.

"Your soul is of more value than nations and empires," the priest declared. "In time they will all disappear. In time this church will crumble, these mountains will be no more but your soul goes on forever. The education, development and salvation of the soul is put first in Catholic education because in all creation, next to God Himself, nothing is of greater value than the soul. All else in the world will pass away.

Some are saying these days that youth has been preparing to preserve the world from certain political evils, that youth is to preserve freedom for the world. Others are telling youth that the world is before them and how they can go forth into it and carve out careers, fame and fortune. All of these aims are desirable but they are not the fundamental and primary purposes of Catholic education.

"When your parents made sacrifices to give you a religious education they had not the slightest idea that you might some day draw up a formula for making a better world. Obviously, your parents are not primarily interested in your careers, fame or wealth. They merely want you to continue to be as good, upright and virtuous as you young high school graduates are now. All of this is but another way of saying that they are interested primarily in your souls."

It was announced at the exercises that Mary Ernestine Davis has earned a four-year scholarship to Ursuline college, Louisville, Ky., for making the highest average during four years of high school. A tuition scholarship valued at $150 was awarded to Anna Lee Weber, second highest in the class.

The Rev. Lawrence P. Landrigan, pastor, presented diplomas to the following fourteen graduates:

Marian Andrews, Mary Ernestine Davis, Anna Divico, Shirley Greene, Helen Miller, Rosemary Malachowski, Josephine Nevy, Evelina Pisaneschi, Mary Angela Rice, Frances Ruppencamp, Grace Schultz, Eleanor Stegmaier, Colleen Turner and Anna Lee Weber.

"Step Straight," Father McKeown Advises Seniors

"Don't Waver," Priest Urges in Talk to 15 Central High Graduates

"Step straight, don't waver," were the words of wisdom imparted by the Rev. Francis McKeown, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's church, to the fifteen members of the senior class at the graduating exercises of Catholic Girls Central high school yesterday morning in St. Patrick's church.

"There is always something impressive about a graduation and there is certainly something impressive about your graduation march," the speaker declared. "That march offers a thought on the meaning and solemnity of your steps today.

"In these steps we find a parallel between the days of school and days ahead. For most of you days of school are over. Each of these days meant steps that were meaningless and tiring and sometimes they were even difficult and trying. For all of you the days of the future lie ahead and if this graduation is to mean anything it will remind you of steps which lie ahead. These steps in your future like steps in your school days will often seem empty and monotonous. They will be difficult and trying and they will be successful only if you use what you were taught in school.

"At times you will be challenged by short cuts, you will be tempted to step aside to the easy way of life—but don't waver, step slowly and step straight. Hold fast to your teachings, stick to your ideals. In plain words this is the aim of all real knowledge. It is the sum of all wisdom. This is the hope and prayer of your parents and teachers. This is the purpose of all Christ's teachings and it is your single, sincere, unwavering step that will be for you an assurance for a worthwhile future. All the worthwhile lessons you learned were learned only step by step and now these must be used in single steps for every job you tackle, for every effort you make, for every temptation you meet, for every success you win. Indeed, everything worthwhile in life is by single worthwhile steps."

Names of the members of the graduating class were announced by the Rev. Thomas A. Hardesty and diplomas were announced by the Rev. Charles W. Bogan to the following fifteen members of the class:

Catherine Therese Artinghellis, Mary Isabelle Becker, Helen Mae Carder, Catherine Elaine Cessna, Mary Elizabeth Hoban, Jeane Frances Hursh, Mary Margaret Kelly, Maxine Elizabeth Leonard, Mary Irene Long, Marguerite Ann McGeady, Mary Hilda McMillan, Ann Josephine Prendergast, Dolores Louise Soterakos, Emma Theresa Ward and Mary Lee Weber.
